Pursuant to IRC Section 301(c), the portion of a distribution which is a dividend (as defined under IRC Section 316) is includable in gross income, while the portion of the distribution which is a non-dividend return of capital shall be applied against and reduce the shareholder's adjusted tax basis of the shares held (but not below zero). Accordingly, pursuant to Internal Revenue Code Sections 301(c)(2) and 1016(a)(4), shareholders who received non-dividend return of capital distributions should treat the return of capital distributions as a reduction of the cost basis of the applicable shares upon which these distributions were paid. To compute the required adjustment to the tax cost basis, shareholders of record should multiply the per-share amount of each respective distribution received by the number of shares held on each respective record date.

Distributions in excess of earnings and profits were recharacterized as a return of capital that reduces each shareholder's tax basis in applicable shares.

The rates were determined in accordance with Internal Revenue Code Sections 301 and 316. Non-dividend return of capital distributions in excess of the shareholder's adjusted tax cost basis is treated as gain from the sale or exchange of property.

No loss can be recognized by the shareholders for the non-dividend return of capital distributions received.
